

Directory of West African Exporters

May 2009

EXPORT READINESS CRITERIA

The West Africa Trade Hub links West African companies to international markets by working closely with export-ready companies in six product categories: apparel, cashew, fish and seafood, handcrafts, shea and specialty foods. We deem a company “export ready” when it fulfills certain criteria, listed below. All of our export-ready companies are listed in a Directory of Exporters, which is updated every three months. The directory is made available to international buyers and investors via the Trade Hub’s website and at trade shows.

What makes a company export-ready?

- Successful export experience and attendance at international marketing events
- Responsiveness and professional communication in English by email
- Professional marketing materials
- Meeting production deadlines
- Quality production, effective quality control and ability to manage the administration related to exporting
- Investments in appropriate tools and equipment
- Ability and willingness to invest in product design or in adapting their products and packaging to international market specifications
- Sustainable, environmentally friendly, or socially responsible production methods and sourcing, when applicable

West Africa Trade Hub

The Trade Hub works with West African business operators to export internationally, acting as an honest broker between the region and global markets. Our work with select export-ready businesses increases their opportunity to grow and compete in the international marketplace, and as a result boosts local and regional economies.

The Trade Hub's Enterprise Development Department focuses primarily on six sectors from throughout the region – shea butter, handicrafts, apparel, specialty foods, processed cashews and fish and seafood – helping develop exporting capacity in products that have the greatest potential on the world market. We provide the linkages and technical assistance – the companies make the deals.
